How Trading Works for ...

Professional Services

New found revenue ...

Whether you work by the hour or by the project, you have goals to meet in terms of customers and the work that's generated. You also have a variety of project complexities—from things that can easily be delegated to employees to things that are in-depth enough to require your personal, professional attention.

If you still have room in your appointment book next month, the room represents money you're leaving on the table. Über Trade provides a way to take that money back by offering your services to other businesses. Those businesses might have needed someone just like you all along, but in the past they've held off for reasons of their own. Trading with them makes it cost effective for both of you. Whether you trade at 100% because the job is easy to do, or you trade at 70% trade and 30% cash because the job requires your personal touch, you'll be able to fill any gaps in your production schedule, billing hours, or editorial calendar efficiently.

More to your bottom line...

Meanwhile, you have needs of your own. How much do you spend on printer ink and printer paper each year? Advertising? A hotel room up-state while you meet with a potential client? Über Trade provides a network of businesses that will accept trade dollars for all of these things, helping you keep more cash in your account. Not only do you get what you need without writing a check, but you also raise your bottom line immediately and everytime you use trade dollars instead of your checkbook
